California Statutes

21 Labor Code § 203 12-13

1      I. INTRODUCTION

2      The Chapter 11 Trustee has not filed an opposition to Mr. Stamp's motion for payment of 3      the retention bonus. Instead, the Trustee has relied entirely on the opposition filed by the Equity 4      Committee. The failure of the Trustee to independently evaluate the wage claim of a former 5      employee is evidence of an intentional violation of the California Labor Code which requires the 6      prompt payment of wages after termination of employment. As established in the moving papers, 7      the Trustee is obligated to comply with the Labor Code in the operation of the business during this 8      Chapter 11 proceeding. He cannot avoid this responsibility by delegating it to the Equity 9      Committee.

10     In any event, the opposition filed by the Equity Committee is undermined and contradicted 11    by the Trustee's own actions. Upon assuming his office, the Trustee personally approved Mr.
12    Stamp's pay at the rate of $180,000 per year as set forth in the October 13, 2008, employment 13    agreement (the "New Employment Agreement"). The Trustee personally signed Mr. Stamp's 14    payroll check which reflected the new rate. (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 18) Moreover, the 15    Trustee's approval was given after the Trustee was informed by the Debtor's accounting manager 16    and human resources manager that the Debtor had previously decided to honor the raise set forth in 17    the New Employment Agreement. (Id., ¶¶ 14-15, 17)

18     More importantly, the Equity Committee has completely ignored Mr. Stamp's equitable 19    argument. The Equity Committee has not denied that the Debtor received benefits under the New 20    Employment Agreement. Instead, the Equity Committee argues that "the swapping of severance 21    benefits for a retention bonus was not, however, a substitution of equals." The Equity Committee 22    has missed the point. The Debtor voluntarily chose to enter into the New Employment Agreement 23    which terminated Mr. Stamp's severance agreement and prior bonus packages. Neither the Debtor 24    nor the Trustee ever made any effort to rescind or repudiate the New Employment Agreement.
25    (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 19) And neither did they ever inform Mr. Stamp that the July 2007
26    severance agreement or prior bonuses would be reinstated. (Id.)

27     On the contrary, the Debtor and the Trustee both honored the New Employment Agreement 28    by increasing the pay rate to $180,000 per year. (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶¶ 14-15, 18) Thus,

1 both the Debtor and the Trustee took actions confirming that the New Employment Agreement was 2 operative. Mr. Stamp resigned his position under the reasonable belief that the New Employment 3 Agreement was the operative agreement and that the Severance Agreement had been terminated.
4 (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 20) The Trustee cannot have it both ways, and the Equity Committee 5 has not disputed that the New Employment Agreement was an “arm’s length transaction.” It is 6 sufficient that the estate received the intangible benefit of “labor peace.” As a result, the Trustee is 7 now “estopped” from denying the burdens of the New Employment Agreement. The Trustee is 8 also bound under both promissory and equitable estoppel due to Mr. Stamp’s detrimental reliance.

9 In its only argument in opposition, the Equity Committee claims that the New Employment 10 Agreement was outside the “ordinary course of business,” and thus needed to be approved by the 11 Court. As mentioned above, this is completely contradicted by the Trustee’s own actions when he 12 personally approved Mr. Stamp’s pay rate at $180,000 per year. Moreover, the argument is based 13 on the faulty premise that the New Employment Agreement was “entered into” when it was signed, 14 one day after the Debtor’s petition was filed. The New Employment Agreement was approved and 15 finalized by the Debtor’s Board of Directors on October 13, 2008. (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 10) 16 The Board’s pre-petition resolution constitutes an enforceable agreement. That the agreement took 17 a few days to memorialize does not alter the effective date of the agreement.

18 Under any circumstances, the New Employment Agreement was entered into “in the 19 ordinary course of business.” Contrary to the Equity Committee’s assertions, the New Employment 20 Agreement did not represent a “radical departure” from Mr. Stamp’s pre-bankruptcy compensation.
21 Mr. Stamp’s post-bankruptcy retention bonus and salary are completely consistent with the 22 Debtor’s pre-petition practices and with the compensation and raises provided to Mr. Stamp during 23 his pre-petition employment with the Debtor.

24 II. LEGAL ARGUMENT

25 A. Mr. Stamp’s employment agreement, approved pre-petition, is binding.

26 The Equity Committee’s entire objection relies on the mistaken assumption that the New 27 Employment Agreement was entered into on the date the agreement was signed. However, Mr.
28 Stamp’s agreement was finalized and approved in a resolution adopted by the Debtor’s Board of 1 Directors at their meeting on October 13, 2008, two days prior to the Debtor's bankruptcy filing.

2 (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 10) Such a resolution constitutes an enforceable contract. See Smith
3 v. Woodville, 66 Cal. 398, 399 (1885) ("The resolution ... is evidence that the president's salary was 4 fixed by contract....").

5 The pre-petition approval of Mr. Stamp's employment agreement via board resolution is 6 equally binding. See In re DeLuca Distributing Co., 38 B.R. 588, 590 (Bankr., N.D. OH 1984). In 7 the DeLuca case, the debtor filed bankruptcy after a collective bargaining agreement had been 8 negotiated, but before the agreement could be reduced to writing. Nevertheless, the court found 9 that the pre-petition agreement was binding: "Although the Union and the Association did not 10 reduce their agreement to writing until January 1984, the court finds that the parties had a binding 11 contract before that date." Id. (emphasis added). In this case, it is the writing itself, signed by the 12 Debtor, that admits Mr. Stamp's New Employment Agreement was "effective as of October 13, 13 2008." (See Stamp Declaration, Exhibit E) The Trustee is bound by this admission.

14 The Equity Committee itself admitted that: "the debtor entered into new employment 15 agreements with each of its employees, effective just prior to the Petition Date." (See Equity 16 Committee's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of Motion for Order Appointing 17 Chapter 11 Trustee, 9:6-7) The Equity Committee is similarly bound by its own admission which it 18 made after "Copies of the employment agreements were provided to the Committee by the 19 debtor...." (Id., FN 21)

20 B. Mr. Stamp's employment agreement was made in the ordinary course of business.

21 Where an employee's new compensation in bankruptcy represents a continuation of the 22 debtor's past practice, then the new compensation is considered to be "in the ordinary course of 23 business" under 11 U.S.C. Section 363(c)(1). See In re DeLuca Distributing Co., 38 B.R. 588, 594 24 (Bankr., N.D. OH 1984) ("The court finds, therefore, that where the debtor's employees have 25 continually been covered by a collective bargaining agreement, a new collective bargaining 26 agreement is a transaction in the ordinary course of business...."); See In re Nellson Nutraceutical, 27 Inc., 369 B.R. 787, 798 (Bankr., D. DE 2007) ("the Debtors' modification of the 2006 [bonus 28 program] was consistent with the Debtors' pre-petition practices – at least for the somewhat limited

1 period of 2003-2005" and was thus considered to be approved in "ordinary course").

2           1. The vertical dimension test is satisfied.

3           Mr. Stamp's New Employment Agreement was not a "radical departure" from his prior 4 compensation. Unlike the cases cited by the Equity Committee (which involved substantial 5 severance packages for employees who never previously had them), Mr. Stamp has had a retention 6 bonus as part of his compensation since July 2007, more than 15 months prior to the Debtor's 7 bankruptcy. Thus, the continuation of a retention bonus for Mr. Stamp during the bankruptcy was 8 consistent with the Debtor's pre-petition practice.

9           Moreover, the magnitude of the raise that Mr. Stamp received just prior to the Debtor's 10 bankruptcy is consistent with, and actually lower than, the magnitude of his past raises; in fact, the 11 overall potential compensation was almost exactly the same, differing by a mere $5,000:

12           — In July 2007, after Mr. Stamp's first 15 months with the Debtor, he was provided a raise 13 in salary from $99,000 to $150,000 per year (more than 50%), an increase in annual bonus package 14 from $10,000 to $40,000 (300%), plus a new severance agreement potentially worth 6 months of 15 salary.

16           — In October 2008, after Mr. Stamp's second 15 months with the Debtor, he was provided 17 a raise in salary from $150,000 to $180,000 per year (20%) and an increase in annual bonus
18 package from $40,000<sup>1</sup> to $90,000 (125%). However, the severance agreement potentially worth 6 19 months salary was terminated.

20           Thus, not only were Mr. Stamp's raises provided over the same time period of 15 months, 21 the raise provided in the New Employment Agreement was actually less in terms of overall percent 22 (for both salary and bonus) than the raise that Mr. Stamp received in July 2007. In addition, the 23 raise in the New Employment Agreement was conditioned upon the termination of the severance 24 agreement. As a result, the total potential compensation for Mr. Stamp under the New Employment 25 Agreement is almost exactly the same amount as Mr. Stamp's pre-bankruptcy compensation.

26           <sup>1</sup> This amount reflects the $10,000 performance bonus in Mr. Stamp's March 2006 offer letter and the non-27 discretionary $30,000 retention bonus confirmed in the September 2007 letter. The Trustee states that $10,000
28 retention bonus was superseded by the 2007 retention bonus. However, there is nothing in the September 2007 letter that extinguishes the earlier bonus. However, even if the Trustee was correct, the magnitude of the raise would have been from $30,000 to $90,000 (200%). This is still lower than the previous raise in bonus.

1       Specifically, the total potential amount of annual compensation under the New Employment
2       Agreement is $270,000. Under the raises and severance agreement provided in July 2007, the total
3       potential compensation is $265,000. An increase of $5,000 in total potential compensation is not a 4       “radical departure” from the previous compensation package, especially considering the lost value
5       of Mr. Stamp’s stock options as discussed below.

6               The Debtor’s pre-petition practices also included attempts to adjust employee stock options
7       to preserve their retentive effect. For example, in May 2007, recognizing that the employee stock 8       options had become worthless, the Debtor voluntarily re-priced the stock options for all employees 9       to $0.29 per share. The re-pricing of the options for the Debtor’s officers and directors, which 10      represented a substantial change in beneficial ownership impacting shareholder value, was publicly 11      disclosed in Form 4 filings with the S.E.C. (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 6) Even so, no
12      shareholder ever filed any objection with the Debtor, ever took any corrective action or ever filed 13      any shareholder complaint. (Id., ¶ 7) Thus, the Debtor’s pre-petition practices included substantial 14      adjustments in compensation for the overpriced options and retention-based compensation for its 15      employees, without any objection from shareholders.

16               Notwithstanding the Debtor’s pre-petition efforts to redress the overpriced options, the 17       Debtor’s stock price continued to fall to as low as $0.03 per share prior to the bankruptcy. Once 18       again, the employee stock options had sunk “below water” and had become virtually worthless.
19       Based on the Debtor’s past practice, it was reasonable to expect that the Debtor would have once 20       again taken some corrective action to resurrect the retention component of employee compensation.
21       In this sense, the new “retention bonus” can be seen as a continuing effort to compensate for the 22       worthless stock options that were provided to the Debtor’s employees, including Mr. Stamp. This 23       is confirmed by the Compensia Report discussed below. Since no shareholder ever objected to this 24       past practice of redressing the overpriced options, it was reasonable not to expect any objection for 25       similar efforts taken during the Debtor’s bankruptcy. As a result, the “vertical dimension test” is 26       satisfied.

27               2. The horizontal dimension test is satisfied.

28       The Debtor retained the consulting firm Compensia to provide recommendations for

1 employee compensation which were consistent with industry practice. (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶
2 9 (Exhibit H – “Compensia Report” at 3 (“Consider market practice for various compensation 3 elements and total program cost”))

4 Compensia recommended that the Debtor’s employees be provided a retention bonus in the 5 total amount of 50% annual salary to vest in equal monthly installments. Compensia’s 6 recommendation was based on its study of transaction-related compensation for 100 public 7 companies. (Id. at 17). In that study, Compensia found that 35% of public companies have 8 retention bonuses. (Id. at 4). Compensia’s recommendation of the retention bonuses was based on 9 the fact that the employee stock options had become worthless due to the steep decline in the 10 company’s stock price. (Id. at 2)(“Current Tvia option holdings provide no retention value...”).

11 Thus, the retention bonuses were considered necessary by Compensia to “fairly 12 compensate” employees who would be driving the Debtor’s penultimate transaction and 13 distribution to shareholders. (Id. at 3) According to Compensia, the retention bonuses represented 14 the typical financial compensation that had been approved by similarly situated companies. As a 15 result, the “horizontal dimension test” is satisfied.

16 C. The Equity Committee’s arguments are unpersuasive.

17 The Equity Committee’s arguments can be summarized as follows: (1) the New 18 Employment Agreement arose out of the developments unique to bankruptcy, (2) opposition to the 19 New Employment Agreement should have been expected based on the contentiousness of the 20 Debtor’s bankruptcy and (3) the Equity Committee would have objected if given the chance. All 21 three of these arguments are ultimately unpersuasive and even contradicted by the Equity 22 Committee’s own actions and statements in these proceedings.

23 1. The new compensation package arose from the Debtor’s prospective sale.

24 It cannot be overemphasized that the Debtor is and has been a solvent company prior to the 25 bankruptcy. The Debtor regularly paid its non-disputed creditors and did not have to file 26 bankruptcy. The Debtor’s problem was that, given the past accounting irregularities and fraud by 27 the sales team, audited financial statements could not be generated. Thus, the Debtor could not 28 continue to operate as a public company without filing financial statements. As a result, the Debtor

1 needed some sort of exit strategy in which it could sell its assets and complete a distribution to 2 shareholders. Bankruptcy was just one vehicle out of many that the Debtor considered to complete
3 the sale of assets. (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 11) This is also confirmed in the Compensia Report 4 which states: “Tvia is currently exploring potential compensation arrangements in the face of a 5 possible sale or bankruptcy/liquidation of the Company.” (See Compensia Report at 2 (emphasis 6 added)) Thus, the new compensation packages proposed by Compensia were tied directly to the 7 Debtor’s efforts to sell the assets. Bankruptcy just happened to be the best vehicle for the sale as 8 was later determined by the Debtor’s Board of Directors.

9       The Equity Committee also claims that the new employment agreements were adopted 10 because “the Severance Agreement would likely be unenforceable in the event of a bankruptcy 11 filing.” Nevertheless, the Equity Committee has failed to provide any analysis or explanation to 12 support this naked assertion.

13       The Severance Agreement states that a “Change of Control” means, among other things, 14 “(3) The sale, transfer or other disposition of all or substantially all of the Company’s assets other 15 than in connection with a dissolution of the Company.” According to the Equity Committee, the 16 Debtor already completed “a sale of substantially all the debtor’s assets” in the Mediatek 17 transaction prior to the bankruptcy. (See Equity Committee’s Memorandum of Points and 18 Authorities in Support of Motion for Order Appointing Chapter 11 Trustee, 14:1-6) The Debtor’s 19 former V.P. of Engineering, David Medin, has also similarly claimed that the Mediatek transaction 20 triggered his own severance agreement and sued the Debtor in Superior Court. (Stamp Reply 21 Declaration, ¶ 8) Given that the Debtor’s five remaining employees each had the substantially 22 same severance agreement as Medin, the termination of those agreements meant the elimination of 23 five potential lawsuits. (Id.)

24       While Mr. Stamp disagrees that the Mediatek deal was a sale of all or substantially all the 25 Debtor’s assets, the point is that various claims could be made under the severance agreements if 26 they were still in effect. For example, the sale of substantially all the Debtor’s assets could have 27 already occurred during the Debtor’s bankruptcy by virtue of the Debtor’s “end of life” sales to 28 customers. In December 2008, the Debtor completed more than $1.5 million in sales to customers

1 after announcing its products to be “end of life” and of questionable availability thereafter. (Stamp 2 Reply Declaration, ¶ 12) The Debtor has not been able to generate sales anywhere close to that 3 amount in the subsequent months, and the Debtor’s investment banker reported that it had received 4 no inquiries about the Debtor’s remaining assets. (Id., ¶ 13) Moreover, by virtue of announcing the 5 Debtor’s intention to sell its assets in the bankruptcy, it is probable that the employee severance 6 agreements would have eventually vested. At the very least, any termination of employment prior 7 to the imminent vesting of the severance agreements would amount to a breach of the covenant of 8 good faith and fair dealing.

9       Thus, it is not nearly good enough for the Equity Committee, or anyone else, to declare by 10 fiat that the pre-petition severance agreements were unenforceable in bankruptcy. The real question 11 is could anyone make a plausible claim under them, and was there any value in eliminating the 12 uncertainty of potential disputes involving these agreements. Having been sued once on the 13 severance agreement already by David Medin, the Debtor in its business judgment thought the 14 answer was yes. Accordingly, the Debtor (with the assistance of Wilson Sonsini) devised new 15 employment agreements which terminated the pre-petition severance agreements. This decision 16 must be viewed at the time the decision was made just prior to the bankruptcy, i.e., when the 17 uncertainties were compounded by the contingencies of future events; not after the fact when 18 everything has already played out.

19       2. The Debtor was mostly successful in the bankruptcy proceedings.

20       The Equity Committee argues that one should have expected opposition to any motion by 21 the Debtor to approve the New Employment Agreement for Mr. Stamp based on the 22 contentiousness of the Debtor’s bankruptcy. However, the majority of the disputes in the Debtor’s 23 bankruptcy were related to the S.E.C. investigation and litigation involving the Debtor’s former 24 employees. The Debtor was successful in nearly every dispute that was resolved by the Bankruptcy 25 Court, such as opposing to the former employees’ request for documents in both the Section 1601
26 action and via Rule 2004, obtaining a stay of the Insider Trading lawsuit, remanding the Trade 27 Secret lawsuit, approving the Debtor’s insurance policy as an asset of the estate and extending the 28 exclusivity period for adoption of a plan. The Equity Committee generally supported the Debtor in

1 these efforts. In the only direct dispute between the Equity Committee and the Debtor, the Motion 2 to Appoint a Chapter 11 Trustee, the Court ruled that the Equity Committee failed to meet its 3 burden.

4 Given the largely successful track record of the Debtor during the bankruptcy, the Debtor
5 most likely would have been successful in any motion to approve Mr. Stamp's New Employment
6 Agreement. Moreover, the approval of the New Employment Agreement by the Board of Directors 7 occurred pre-petition, at the October 13, 2008, board meeting. This was before the bankruptcy was 8 even filed and before any contentiousness occurred. In contrast, in the cases cited by the Equity 9 Committee, the management approved the new severance agreements after the bankruptcy had been 10 in process for several months and in which the management was mostly unsuccessful. That is not 11 the case here.

12 3. The Equity Committee's e-mail "objection" was defective.

13 Finally, the Equity Committee insists that it did object to the New Employment Agreement 14 in the form of an e-mail sent in February 2009. (See Katz Declaration, Exhibit A) However, a 15 careful inspection of the "objection" shows that the concern was directed towards both the 16 "retention bonus" and the "severance."

17 Specifically, Mr. Katz states: "I would appreciate a response tonight regarding a stipulation 18 that no payments will be made to employees on account of retention bonuses or severance" 19 (emphasis added).

20 First, there was no objection to the entirety of the New Employment Agreement or the 21 payment of salary at the annual rate of $180,000 as set forth therein. The Equity Committee did not 22 request that the terminated Severance Agreement be reinstated or that the other benefits received by 23 the Debtor under the New Employment Agreement be returned. In fact, it was just the opposite.
24 The Equity Committee wanted it both ways; it wanted to stop payment on both the retention bonus
25 and the severance. Nevertheless, the Equity Committee is not entitled to a line item veto in which it 26 can choose to reject portions of the agreement it does not like while retaining its benefits. See In re
27 DeLuca Distributing Co., 38 B.R. 588, 594 (Bankr., N.D. OH 1984); In re Standard Laundry Co., 28 116 F. 476, 478 (9th Cir. 1902).

1           Furthermore, the Equity Committee's partial objection to the "retention bonus" was based 2 on Section 503(c), and not that the New Employment Agreement was made outside the ordinary 3 course of business. (See Equity Committee's Memorandum of Points and Authorities in Support of 4 Motion for Order Appointing Chapter 11 Trustee, 9:12-16)

5           The Equity Committee also limited its objection to the payment of retention bonuses to 6 "insiders" under Section 503(c): "To date the debtor has wisely refrained from paying the retention 7 bonuses called for in the new employment agreements. But this restraint does nothing to lessen the 8 impropriety of the attempted end-run around the provisions of Section 503(c) of the Bankruptcy
9 Code, which prohibit the debtor from making any payment on an obligation incurred to an insider
10 in order to induce such insider's retention." (Id.)

11           Thus, based on the Equity Committee's own past statements in this case, one could not 12 expect an "ordinary course" objection to the payment of a retention bonus to a non-insider 13 employee like Mr. Stamp. The Equity Committee is bound by its admission that there was a 14 distinction between insiders and non-insider employees. (Id., 9:5-7 ("Other insiders and employees 15 too benefited ... as the debtor entered into new employment agreements with each of its employees, 16 effective just prior to the Petition Date.)(emphasis added))

17           D. Equity requires payment of the "retention bonus" to Mr. Stamp.

18           Equity provides a complete and independent basis for ordering payment of the retention 19 bonus. The acceptance of "labor peace" provided by the New Employment Agreement is a 20 sufficient benefit to operate as an estoppel against the estate. See In re DeLuca Distributing Co., 38 21 B.R. 588, 594 (Bankr., N.D. OH 1984); In re Standard Laundry Co., 116 F. 476, 478 (9th Cir.
22 1902). In DeLuca, the debtor negotiated a collective bargaining agreement as part of a distribution 23 association. The debtor "never attempted to withdraw from the Association" and "accepted the 24 benefits of labor peace provided by the New Agreement." Id. "Having been authorized by this 25 court to operate its business and having entered into a collective bargaining agreement, the debtor 26 cannot now claim that it lacked authority." Id. As a result, the court held that: "Equity dictates that 27 the debtor is estopped from now claiming that it is not bound by the New Agreement." Id.

28           Similarly, here, neither the Debtor nor the Trustee ever attempted to withdraw from Mr.

1 Stamp's New Employment Agreement. (Stamp Reply Declaration, ¶ 19) On the contrary, both the 2 Debtor and the Trustee voluntarily paid Mr. Stamp at the rate of $180,000 per year provided under 3 the New Employment Agreement. (Id., ¶¶ 14-15, 18) Neither the Debtor nor the Trustee ever 4 attempted to rescind or repudiate the new agreement, and they never informed Mr. Stamp that the 5 original Severance Agreement or previous bonuses would be reinstated. (Id., ¶ 19)

6 Instead, the Debtor and the Trustee both accepted the benefits of "labor peace" in not having 7 to deal with any claims under Mr. Stamp's Severance Agreement or the older bonus package. For 8 example, had the Severance Agreement been in place Mr. Stamp would not have resigned and 9 would have actually had a claim for $90,000 after his inevitable termination. (Id., ¶ 20) Thus, the 10 estate has faired much better under the New Employment Agreement, because Mr. Stamp's total 11 claim has been reduced in half to $45,000.

12 In addition, Mr. Stamp would have had a claim for $15,000 under his prior retention bonus 13 and for an additional $10,000 under his original performance bonus. (Id., ¶ 20) Though the 14 Trustee argues the performance bonus was extinguished prior to the New Employment Agreement, 15 this is not the case. There is nothing in writing to this effect and the lack of payment in 2008 is not 16 determinative. The performance bonus was based on objectives "to be defined." If the Debtor did 17 not comply, it represents a breach, not extinguishment.

18 Contrary to the Trustee's assertion, Mr. Stamp's bonus packages were eliminated by the 19 New Employment Agreement, and Mr. Stamp has been prejudiced in that he has not been able to 20 make these claims. By adopting the more straightforward compensation package in the New 21 Employment Agreement, the estate has benefitted from a certain amount of "labor peace" in not 22 having to deal with the myriad of more extensive claims under the older compensation package.<sup>2</sup>
23 Moreover, under the doctrines of promissory and equitable estoppel, there is no need for the estate

24 <sup>2</sup> The Debtor paid Mr. Stamp $7,500 in December 2008 and $2,500 in February 2009 after learning that the payroll had 25 not been changed to reflect the New Employment Agreement. The Debtor realized that it had mistakenly been 26 paying Mr. Stamp under the old pay rate of $150,000 per year ($12,500 per month). The Debtor determined 27 that Mr. Stamp should have been paid at the rate of $180,000 per year ($15,000 per month) as provided in the 28 New Employment Agreement. Consequently, in February 2009, a "catch up" payment of $2,500 was issued to Mr. Stamp. The $7,500 payment made in December was the equivalent amount that was owed to Mr. Stamp under the new rate for the period from October to December 2008, so no catch up payment was needed for that period. This information was provided to the Trustee by the Debtor's accounting manager and human resources manager prior to the Trustee's approval of Mr. Stamp's final paycheck on April 15, 2009.

1 to have received any benefit. Mr. Stamp's detrimental reliance is sufficient, in and of itself, to 2 establish that the New Employment Agreement should be enforced due to equity.

3 E. The “potential offsets” are frivolous and cannot be used to avoid paying wages.

4 In his joinder, the Trustee states that he is “investigating certain claims” against Mr. Stamp 5 and that these may result in “potential offsets” against payment of administrative expenses.
6 However, the Trustee has not identified a single claim. To allow the Trustee to avoid paying wages 7 to former employees any time he imagines an entirely non-descript and hypothetical claim would 8 vitiate the holding of In re Metro Fulfillment, Inc. (Gonzalez v. Gottlieb), 294 B.R. 306, 311-313
9 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 2003). In that case, the 9th Circuit ruled that a Chapter 11 Trustee must comply 10 with the California Labor Code in the operation of its business. The court assessed penalty wages 11 under Labor Code Section 203 after the failure to pay employees their owed wages for post-petition 12 employment. This assessment was made in recognition of Labor Code's requirement that wages to 13 employees be made “promptly.” See Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists, 63 Cal. App. 4th 563, 14 574, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 36 (1998).

15 Under the argument posed by the Trustee, any Chapter 11 debtor can avoid paying wages to 16 its employees by announcing that he is investigating the possibility of claims against them. He 17 doesn't know what claims there might be, but just the investigation alone would allow the Trustee 18 to avoid complying with the Labor Code. This absurd position cannot be countenanced by the 19 Court.

20 It is for this reason that an employer cannot use any setoff against wages under California 21 law. “In summary, it is clear from the many Labor Code sections set out above … that there is in 22 this state a fundamental and substantial public policy protecting an employee's wages, and that 23 protection includes freedom from setoffs....” Phillips v. Gemini Moving Specialists, 63 Cal. App.
24 4th 563, 574, 74 Cal. Rptr. 2d 29, 36 (1998). Since the Trustee is required to operate the business in 25 Chapter 11 in compliance with the Labor Code, the Trustee cannot properly claim a setoff to avoid 26 paying wages to a former employee.

27 F. The “insider” issue under Section 503(c) has been conceded.

28 The Equity Committee has not disputed that Mr. Stamp's dealings with the Debtor were

1 consistently at “arm’s length.” Thus, Mr. Stamp cannot be an “insider” as a matter of law. In re
2 Lemanski, 56 B.R. 981, 983 (Bankr., W.D. WI 1986); followed by In re Shuman, 81 B.R. 583, 586
3 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 1987); followed by In re Enterprise Acquisition Partners, Inc., 319 B.R. 626, 633, 4 FN 5 (9th Cir. B.A.P. 2004).

5 Nevertheless, the Equity Committee asks for the opportunity to conduct discovery on the 6 issue of whether Mr. Stamp was a “person in control of the debtor.” However, the Equity 7 Committee has not even attempted to provide any “offer of proof” or posited any theory explaining 8 how Mr. Stamp could have been “in control” of the Debtor in light of the undisputed facts in Mr.
9 Stamp’s declaration. Given this total absence of rationale supporting discovery, the request should 10 be denied.

11 The Equity Committee has already engaged in an extensive investigation of the Debtor’s 12 affairs: “the Committee reviewed extensive documents (provided by the debtor)” in “nearly five 13 weeks of intense efforts.” (See Equity Committee’s Memorandum of Points and Authorities in 14 Support of Motion for Order Appointing Chapter 11 Trustee, 2:3-5) The documents provided by 15 the Debtor included the employee agreements. (Id., FN 21) Moreover, the Trustee has complete 16 access to the Debtor’s books and records and yet failed to provide any meaningful opposition. The 17 undisputed facts set forth in Mr. Stamp’s declaration establish that he could not have been an 18 “insider” as a matter of law. Both the Equity Committee and the Trustee have failed to present any 19 facts which alter that conclusion.

20 III. CONCLUSION

21 For all the foregoing reasons, the Court should order the Chapter 11 Trustee to pay Mr.
22 Stamp’s “retention bonus” in the amount of $45,000. In addition, the Court should order the 23 payment of penalty wages to Mr. Stamp in the amount of $22,500, pursuant to California Labor 24 Code Section 203.
